

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
1 Settler Primitivism in South Africa between the 1920s and 1960s	25
1.1 Theoretical background and context	25
1.1.1 Influential contemporary publications	26
1.1.2 Settler primitivism	28
1.2 South African settler primitivists: seven case studies	36
1.2.1 Irma Stern (1894–1966): exoticising portraits of Black women	39
1.2.2 Maggie Laubser (1886–1973): domestication of land and labour	53
1.2.3 Jacob Hendrik Pierneef (1886–1957): primitivism in Afrikaner nationalism	66
1.2.4 Lippy Lipshitz (1903–1980): religiosity and indigeneity	73
1.2.5 Gregoire Boonzaier (1909–2005): romantic “slum” scenes	83
1.2.6 Walter Battiss (1906–1982): appropriating San rock paintings for a new national art	88
1.2.7 Alexis Preller (1911–1975): primitivist mystifications of Ndebele women	96
1.3 Conclusion	102
2 Reception of Settler Primitivism in South Africa	105
2.1 Artists’ myths	106
2.1.1 Gregoire Boonzaier and male artists’ myths	106
2.1.2 Lippy Lipshitz and Jewish stereotypes	108
2.1.3 Jacob Hendrik Pierneef and Afrikaner stereotypes	111
2.2 Reception of settler primitivists in the 1920s and 1930s	116
2.2.1 Defence of modernist style through transnationalism and primitivism	116
2.2.2 Black South Africans as subjects of modern art criticism	119

2.3 Reception of settler primitivists from the 1940s to 1960s	122
2.3.1 Dissociation of Europe and “indigenisation”	125
2.3.2 South Africa’s spirit and soul	129
2.3.3 South African soil	131
2.3.4 “Native” art	133
2.4 Other primitivist terms featuring in 1920s to 1960s art criticism	135
2.5 South African settler primitivism and social criticism	139
2.6 Conclusion	143
3 South African Artists and the Image of the Neue Frau	147
3.1 The Neue Frau	150
3.1.1 Current considerations of the Neue Frau	150
3.1.2 Contemporary texts	152
3.2 Irma Stern in the role of the Neue Frau	157
3.2.1 Particularities of the Neue Frau in the South African art scene	157
3.2.2 Irma Stern cultivates her image as Neue Frau with traditional values	162
3.2.3 Irma Stern in the German and South African press	166
3.3 Maggie Laubser and the ideology of voortrekkervrou and volksmoeder	178
3.3.1 Maggie Laubser sets the parameters for the reception of her work	178
3.3.2 Voortrekkervrou and volksmoeder : Afrikaner variations of the Neue Frau	183
3.3.3 Reception of Maggie Laubser as Neue Frau and volksmoeder	185
3.4 Conclusion	191
4 Excursus: Networks	195
4.1 Women’s networks	195
4.2 Jewish diaspora	205
4.3 Afrikaner networks	212
4.4 The New Group	217
4.5 Conclusion	227

Contents	vii
Conclusion	231
Abbreviations for Archival Records	237
Bibliography	239
Original Texts of Translations	267
Illustration Credits	275