

Acknowledgments

It was a privilege to write this book as a dissertation under the supervision of Prof. Dr. Bettina Gockel at the University of Zurich. My gratitude extends to her for her tireless expert support. Prof. Dr. Kelley Wilder at De Montfort University, Leicester, provided valuable feedback and encouragement. Prof. Dr. Monika Wagner, Prof. Dr. Dario Gamboni, Prof. Geoffrey Batchen, Prof. Dr. François Brunet, and Prof. Dr. Olivier Lugon all offered helpful criticism on presentations of the project. I also owe special appreciation to Prof. Dr. Wolfgang Kersten and Dr. Wolfgang Brückle for shaping the path that brought me to the present topic. The Swiss National Science Foundation financially supported the research for this study in its most critical phase. Martin Steinbrück along with Dr. Maria Effinger and her staff at the Heidelberg University Library patiently helped turn the manuscript into a book. This book is published with the support of the Swiss National Science Foundation for the promotion of scientific research.

One of the most cherished outcomes of this project is the friendship it kindled with Judith Hibbard-Mipaas. I am grateful to Judith as well as Debra Mipos for answering my questions about Esther Lewittes Mipaas and entrusting me with the care of Esther's photographs and papers. Julia Van Haften shared helpful genealogical findings and suggestions for sources on photographers of the Left. Laura Diamond Dixit, Rubén Alcolea, and Evelyn De Wolfe in turn all generously shared their research, expertise, and memories of the Housing Authority photographers and their work. Dr. Raymond Neutra of the Neutra Institute for Survival Through Design kindly granted permission to publish images of Richard Neutra's architecture. Victor Rini also graciously shared his family's history as well as his own research and photographs of the neighborhoods of Chávez Ravine.

I am further indebted to the generosity of numerous archivists and librarians, especially Filine Wagner of the gta Archive, Michele Welsing of the Southern California Library, Christina Rice and her colleagues at Los Angeles Public Library, Chris Marino, Jason Miller, and David Eifler of the College of Environmental Design at the University of California, Berkeley, Molly Haigh and her colleagues at the Charles E. Young Research Library Special Collections, Richard P. Hulser of the Research Library and Archives at the Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County, Rose Mitchell of the A C Bilbrew Library Black Resource Center, Dorothy Lazard of the Oakland History Room as well as her colleagues at the Oakland Public Library, Joey Herring of the Museum of Photographic Arts, Dace Taube and Marje Schuetze-Coburn of the Special Collections and Archives at the University of Southern California, Robert Dirig of the ArtCenter Archives, Roger Brown of the UCLA Instructional Media Collections and Services, Michael Stone and his colleagues at the UCLA Chicano Studies Research Center, Aimee Calfin and her colleagues at the Getty Research Institute, Keith Rice of the Tom and Ethel Bradley Center, David N. Sigler of the Oviatt Library, Dino Everett of the USC SCA Hugh M. Hefner Moving Image Archive, and Jim Kern of the Vallejo Naval and Historical Museum. I am also grateful for the support of Tami Suzuki and Christina Moretta at the San Francisco History Center of the San Francisco Public Library, Claire Gabriel of the Russell Sage Foundation, Eisha Neely and Elaine D. Engst of the Division of Rare and Manuscript Collections, Cornell University, Renata Guttman of the Canadian Centre for Architecture, Kevin Wong of the Housing Authority of the City of Los Angeles, David Lowe of the New York Public Library, Celeste Brewer and Shannon McDonald of the New York University Archives, Nancy Adgent and Michele Hiltzik Beckerman of the Rockefeller Archive Center, and Florine McCutchen of Columbia University. The staff of the Bancroft Library, the Berkeley Public Library, Occidental College Library, the British Library, and the National Archives and Records Administration all provided access to their rare holdings.

In addition to many of the people mentioned above, Dr. Annie Segan, Prof. Mary Lee Baranger, Pauline Wolstencroft of the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, Karen Noble at the Museum of Photographic Arts, Erin Chase at the Huntington Library, Art Museum and Botanical Gardens, Linnea Anderson at the Social Welfare History Archives, Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Tracey Schuster at the Getty Research Institute, the librarians at the Library of Congress, the staff at Taschen, JOVIS Verlag, and employees and representatives of the Housing Authority of the City of Los Angeles, the Housing Authority and the City of Vallejo, L'Architecture d'Aujourd'hui, House Beautiful, Macy's, Inc., the Travers Family Trust, and Frank Sinatra Enterprises aided in ensuring that every possible effort was made to track down rights holders for the images reproduced in this book.

Several much-admired colleagues aided in the completion of this study in invaluable ways. Patrizia Munforte, Filine Wagner, and Simone Westermann offered insights, friendship, and shared interests. Miriam Volmert kindly read and commented on the study's fourth chapter. Her discerning suggestions significantly improved not only this chapter, but the rest of the book, as well. The late Nanni Baltzer, whom I miss very much, encouraged the pursuit of questions underlying chapters 3 and 4. Sophie Junge, Thomas Keller, Stella Jungmann, Katharina Haack, Marc-Joachim Wasmer, Louise Malcolm, Nadine Helm, Anne Röhl, Anika Reineke, Daniela Wegmann, Birk Weiberg, Bettina Preiswerk, and many others in the University of Zurich's Media History of the Arts Doctoral Program and at the Institute of Art History were all thoughtful interlocutors from the earliest stages of this project. Colleagues at Diablo Valley College and the City College of San Francisco offered suggestions and support. Special thanks go to Vesna Rodic, Thorsten Bockisch, Michael Almaguer, Nicholas Baer, David Young Kim, Ken Monnens, and Erin Miller for their generous mentorship. Filine Wagner, Simone Westermann, Ed Wouk, and Danilo Raponi always provided excellent reasons to gather around tables around the world.

Finally, my love and thanks go to the people who will always be there for me. To my mother, Michele Arcidiacono Krup, and my sister, Alexis Krup: my deepest thanks for sharing with me your loves of art and science and ensuring that I had good company in my research travels. To my father, Michael Krup: my gratitude for sharing with me your memories of growing up in postwar Southern California. To my brother, Michael Thomas Krup: thank you for always reminding me to enjoy life. And to my loving husband, Johannes: thank you for sharing in all of life's adventures with me. This book is for you.
