Acknowledgements

Many people have supported me in the realisation of this project and I feel grateful to every single one of them. I particularly thank my supervisor Nils Büttner for his unfailing support and encouragement, which has been unwavering since our very first conversation on Rubens. I could not have wished for better guidance or more astute advice.

I owe exceptional gratitude to Gitta Bertram and Katharina Frank, my former doctoral colleagues and predecessors in this series of publications. I have profited endlessly from their experience and expertise, which they have always shared without hesitation. I also simply thank them for all the fun we had in the process.
