

THE WINTER SCHOOL AT MINIA AND MALLAWI

WINTER SCHOOL AT MINIA AND MALLAWI

Fig. 25 Prof. Hussein A. M. Ibrahim, Prof. Regine Schulz, members of the museum staff and students participating in our project in front of the Mallawi Museum.

Fig. 26 (left): Discussing a battered statue head (cat. V.I) in the Mallawi Museum.

Fig. 27 (right): "Funerary portrait panels/mummy portraits" workshop at the Akhenaten Museum Minia.

Brandl, Helmut and Sven Kielau: The Winter School at Hildesheim: Photographic Impressions, in: Brandl, Helmut, Hussein M. A. Ibrahim, Sven Kielau, and Regine Schulz (eds) (2025): Ancient Egypt in the Museums of Mallawi and Hildesheim. Heidelberg: Propylaeum, pp. 38-43.
<https://doi.org/10.11588/propylaeum.1362.c19025>

Fig. 28 (left): Attending a lecture at Minia University.

Fig. 29 (right): The future Akhenaten Museum Minia (under construction).

Fig. 30 Archaeology talk of Dr. Sven Kielau on "Funerary portrait panels / mummy portraits" in the temporary administration building of the future Akhenaten Museum Minia.

WINTER SCHOOL AT MINIA AND MALLAWI

Fig. 31 (left): The Aten, Akhenaten's unique solar god at sunrise. Relief depiction in the royal tomb of Tell el-Amarna (detail).

Fig. 32 (right): Discussing the topography of Tell el-Amarna, the ruins of Akhenaten's and Nefert-iti's ancient capital, Akhet-Aten.

Fig. 33 (left): Prof. Hussein M. A. Ibrahim explaining inside the royal tomb at Tell el-Amarna.

Fig. 34 (right): Pharaoh Sety II (19th Dynasty) worshipping the god Ptah (the scene is only partly preserved). Relief on the gate of the temple of Amun-Re at Hermopolis Magna.

Fig. 35 (left): Travelling in the Amarna Plain. The northern mountain range (visible in the background) contains relief-decorated rock tombs of court officials from the reign of Akhenaten.

Fig. 36 (right): Ruined pylon of the temple of Amun-Re at Hermopolis Magna at sunset (detail).

Fig. 37 (left): Inspectors at El-Ashmounein explaining the archaeology of the Hellenistic "Ptolemaion" temple and the early Christian Basilica of Hermopolis Magna.

Fig. 38 (right): Meeting the Coptic priest, Prof. Regine Schulz and the priest of the village Nazletedid near Minia.