Vorwort des Herausgeberteams

Das Mainzer Akademieprojekt „Altägyptische Kursivschriften (AKU)“¹ widmet sich der dreitausendjährigen Entwicklung und den diversen Ausprägungen des Hieratischen und der Kursivhieroglyphen im Rahmen eines überwiegend digital orientierten Langzeitvorhabens. Die neue Reihe „Beiträge zu Altägyptischen Kursivschriften (BAKU)“ wird diverse Forschungsergebnisse dieses Vorhabens präsentieren, darunter vor allem umfangreiche Paläographien zu verschiedenen Quellen und Schriftphasen, die das Projektteam nach und nach behandelt. Daneben können themenrelevante Monographien, gerne auch aus internationalen Kooperationen oder von externen Expertinnen und Experten, in diese Reihe aufgenommen werden. Das inhaltliche Spektrum der Reihe BAKU umfasst neben der Zeichen- und Formenvielfalt, also der eigentlichen Paläographie der Kursivschriften, die Berücksichtigung der Materialität der Schriftträger, die individuellen Ausprägungen einzelner Schreiberhände sowie die gesellschaftlichen Funktionen, Anwendungen und Kombinationen der verschiedenen Schriftarten. Ein wichtiger Fokus liegt zudem auf der Entwicklung und Anwendung digitaler Methoden für die Dokumentation, Datenverarbeitung und Analyse handschriftlicher Quellen im Kontext der Digital Humanities. Alle Einreichungen werden durch das Herausgeberteam und durch externe peer reviews evaluiert.

Wir freuen uns sehr, die Reihe mit einer erstmals erstellten Paläographie zur besonderen Schriftart des sog. Schulbuches Kemyt eröffnen zu können. Unsere langjährige Kooperationspartnerin Aurore Motte hat diese aus über 200 Quellen zusammengetragen.

Um das neu gewählte Format dieser Veröffentlichungsreihe vorzustellen, seien an dieser Stelle einige Hinweise zur Intention der Herausgebenden und zur Benutzerfreundlichkeit für die Lesenden erlaubt:

Die enthaltenen Hieratogramme sind alle auch digital in der Open-Access-Paläographie AKU-PAL² aufzurufen. Die hier gewählte Buchform stellt aber nicht nur ein zusätzliches Medium dar, das die Existenz der digital produzierten Daten materiell und auf Dauer sichern kann. Die speziell formatierte Seitenansicht, die über das von Tobias Konrad entwickelte Programm L^AT_EX-Paleography automatisiert aus der AKU-Datenbank heraus erstellt wird, ermöglicht einen leichteren optischen Vergleich vieler Zeichen und bietet durch das traditionelle Blättern im Buch neben gezielter Suche auch zufällige Entdeckungen und zudem einen guten Überblick über das vorhandene Zeichenrepertoire.

Die Paläographien orientieren sich an den überkommenen Zeichenkategorien von Gardiner³, *JSesh*⁴ bzw. *Manuel de Codage*⁵. Das AKU-Projekt hat allerdings Veränderungen in Bezug auf die ersten drei Kategorien vorgenommen, da im Hieratischen die rein anthropomorphen Gottheiten Formen aufweisen, die besser den Kategorien A. MÄNNER bzw. B. FRAUEN zugeordnet werden. Kategorie C enthält in AKU-PAL menschlich-tierische Mischgestalten, während Gardiner unter „C. Anthropomorphic Deities“ nur Gottheiten mit menschlichen und tierischen Köpfen beiderlei Geschlechts zusammengefasst hatte. Die allmählich immer kleiner werdende Kategorie UNKLASSIFIZIERTES, die bei Gardiner unter Aa gelistet war,⁶ firmiert hier (wie in JSesh) am Ende der Liste unter dem freien und einstelligen Buchstaben „J“.

Die Bände werden durch die Bereitstellung in der Open-Access-Publikationsplattform Propylaeum sowohl in Buchform als auch als PDF digital lesbar sein. Grapheme und Texte sind über ihre IDs mit AKU-PAL per Hyperlink verknüpft. Die Graphem- und Text-IDs können aber auch von Buchlesern leicht in ihre entsprechende stabile URL von AKU-PAL eingetragen werden.⁷ Um den Verkaufspreis der Bücher attraktiv zu gestalten, werden umfangreiche Rubra dort im Gegensatz zur PDF grau wiedergegeben.

Wir hoffen, mit dieser hybriden Publikationsform den Anforderungen des konventionellen Arbeitens mit Büchern als auch des digitalen Arbeitens mit dynamischen Datenbanken und Online-Tools gerecht zu werden und freuen uns auf weitere Manuskript-einreichungen.

Wir danken unseren Kolleginnen und Kollegen sehr herzlich, die sowohl in der Projektkommission der Mainzer Akademie der Wissenschaften und der Literatur als auch im Advisory Board für diese Reihe engagiert mitwirken. Katrin Bemman und Daniela Jakob waren seitens Propylaeum sehr hilfreich bei der Einrichtung der Reihe und dem Layout für die Umschlaggestaltung, das in Zusammenarbeit mit Tobias Konrad entstand.

Preface

The idea of a paleography of the Book of Kemyt emerged in my mind during my post-doctoral fellowship, which was sponsored by the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation and which I started in 2020, in the middle of the COVID-19 pandemic. This unprecedented situation had a terrible impact on the mobility aspect of my project, for which I was supposed to visit many museum and research institute collections hosting Kemyt sources. I had to introduce requests for high-resolution pictures instead and select a few museums I could visit in person when traveling was allowed. Additionally, the initial 24-month fellowship was extended to 36 months thanks to the parenting support policy of the Humboldt Foundation, making this project happen despite the setbacks accumulated due to the pandemic. I gratefully acknowledge the financial support of the Humboldt Foundation. This has also been made possible thanks to the F.R.S-FNRS support, which sponsored my research during the last steps of this book.

Over these three years, I have met, collaborated, and worked with incredible colleagues whom I would like to thank.

First of all, I would like to express my deepest appreciation to Ursula Verhoeven-van Elsbergen (University Professor for Egyptology at Johannes Gutenberg University Mainz), who acted not only as a caring supervisor in my host institution and held a seminar on the Book of Kemyt together with me but is an inspirational figure in academia. Her team of the Mainz Academy project “Altägyptische Kursivschriften” (AKU) with Simone Gerhards, Svenja A. Gülden, Tobias Konrad, Tabitha Kraus, Michael Leuk, Kyra van der Moezel, and Pascal Siesenop, has been paramount. Their kindness and willingness to share knowledge and expertise gave me the confidence to start A Paleography of the Book of Kemyt. I’m particularly indebted to Svenja A. Gülden, who patiently trained me to create my own Adobe Illustrator facsimiles following the AKU methodology, and to Tobias Konrad, who imported my data into the AKU project database and wrote a program (L^AT_EX-Paleography) for good-looking paleographies. Their help should not be underestimated. In particular, Tobias Konrad’s contribution to the creation of this book is best expressed in the words “in collaboration with”. I also thank the editors of the new series “Beiträge zu Altägyptischen Kursivschriften (BAKU)” for the invitation to publish my study as the first volume and for their careful proofreading and editing of the manuscript.

Preface

This book would not have been possible without the kind permission of museums and research institutions to do drawings of the Kemyt material they house. I would like to express my thanks to: Aly Abdel Halim (Director of the Egyptian Museum in Cairo), Marwa Abdel Razek (Head of the Registration Collection Management and Documentation Department, Egyptian Museum in Cairo), Susan Allison (Associate Registrar, ISAC museum, Chicago), Niv Allon (Assistant Curator Egyptian Art, Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York), Anna Consonni (Curator of the “Museo Egizio” Section, National Archaeological Museum of Florence), Federico Contardi (Senior Lecturer in Egyptology, Università degli studi di Firenze), Emma Darbyshire (Image Library Manager, The Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge), Dina A. Faltings (Curator of the Egyptian Collection, Heidelberg Center for Cultural Heritage), Sonia Focke (Kulturvermittlung, Staatliches Museum Ägyptischer Kunst, München), Jana Helmbold-Doyé (scientific researcher, Ägyptisches Museum, Leipzig), Cédric Larcher (Head of Archives Department, IFAO, Cairo), Verena Lepper (Curator for Egyptian and Oriental Papyri, Ägyptisches Museum und Papyrussammlung, Berlin), Helen McDonald (Registrar, ISAC museum, Chicago), Jan Moje (scientific researcher, Ägyptisches Museum und Papyrussammlung, Berlin), Claudia Noferi (Archaeologist Officer, National Archaeological Museum of Florence), Pavel Onderka (Head of the Collection Department, Náprstek museum, Prague), Ilona Regulski (former Curator Egypt and Sudan, British Museum, London), Pierre Tallet (Director of the IFAO, Cairo), Susanne Töpfer (Curator of the papyri collection, Museo Egizio, Turin), Hans-Werner Fischer-Elfert (Retired Professor of Egyptology, University of Leipzig), Catriona Wilson (Head of Petrie Egyptian and Sudanese Archaeology Collection, UCL Culture, London), and Abbes Zouache (Study Director of the IFAO).

I'm extremely grateful to Annie Gasse (Emeritus Research Director, CNRS) and Florence Albert (former scientific member of IFAO, Cairo) for including me in the IFAO “literary ostraca” project. I'm also deeply indebted to Rob Demarée (Leiden University) and Fredrik Hagen (University of Copenhagen), who kindly let me work on the material they were in charge of. I extend my gratitude to the colleagues who generously shared their facsimiles for their inclusion in this volume or allowed me to use their photographs to realize new digital drawings: Christophe Barbotin (Louvre), Günter Burkard (Würzburg), Rob Demarée (Leiden University), Fredrik Hagen (University of Copenhagen), Svenja A. Gülden/Ursula Verhoeven (Akademie der Wissenschaften und der Literatur/Johannes Gutenberg University Mainz), Olaf Kaper (Leiden University), Hana Navratilova (Harris Manchester College – University of Oxford, Reading University), Julian Posch (University of Innsbruck), Vanessa Ritter, and Nico Staring (Leiden University).

I would also like to express my thanks to the other colleagues from the Department of Egyptology at the Institute for Ancient Studies, Johannes Gutenberg University Mainz, in particular, Alexander Ilin-Tomich, Andrea Kilian, Ruth Kreis-Thies, Olena Romanova, and Monika Zöller-Engelhardt. Together with the AKU team, they made me feel part of a kind-hearted family in Mainz.

A big thank you to Khaled Hassan (MUST University, Giza), Hana Navratilova (Harris Manchester College – University of Oxford/Reading University), Richard Parkinson (Queen’s College – University of Oxford), and Anne-Claire Salmas (University of Oxford), who were always prompt to help me whenever needed, as well as all my colleagues from the University of Liège, who were present during the last steps before completion: Zacharie Cochin, Emil Joubert, Stéphane Polis, Philipp Seyr, Nathalie Sojic, and Jean Winand.

A special thanks goes to Margaret Geoga (University of Chicago) for her friendship over time zones and geographical distance and Laurence Neven (University of Liège) for her never-ending friendship. Their help cannot be overestimated through our endless chats. I would be remiss in not mentioning Judith Jurjens (Leiden University), who accepted to be part of the happy adventures of Looking Beyond the Text: Scribal Practices in Ancient Egypt with Maggie and me, as well as Renaud Pietri (Louvre), with whom I discussed many times, among other things, the notion of “diagnostic sign” while drawing facsimiles and thinking of this paleography.

At last, this endeavor would not have been possible without my (extended) family’s love and unwavering support. You were crucial to the successful completion of this book. Thank you!!

Aurore Motte, February 2025

1 Introduction

Taking the artefact as the starting point, not the text

Friedrich (2024, 16)

During my postdoctoral research into the materiality of the Book of Kemyt¹ at the Johannes Gutenberg University Mainz in collaboration with the AKU team,² I became particularly intrigued by the distinctive features of the Kemyt script. Analyzing the materiality without considering the script seemed inadequate for my goal of (re)contextualizing this text.³ This insight led me to prepare a paleography, which I felt was essential for a deeper understanding of this letter-like composition. I proceeded to secure rights and permissions for handmade facsimiles and digital drawings, inspired by the AKU methodology (cf. chapter 3 and section 3.2.2). The extensive data generated prompted me to make these resources available in open access for further research, independent of the interpretative aspects of my initial project. Additionally, the data have been imported into the internal AKU project database and the open access platform AKU-PAL,⁴ facilitating comparisons with other hieratograms and graphemes, and contributing to the creation of a digital paleography of ancient Egyptian cursive scripts.

¹ This project was funded by the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation from 2020 to 2023 and carried out at the Department of Egyptology at the Institute for Ancient Studies, Johannes Gutenberg University Mainz. The last steps leading to the completion of this book were pursued thanks to an F.R.S.-FNRS fellowship at the University of Liège.

² For a concise presentation of the project “Altägyptische Kursivschriften” (AKU) led by Ursula Verhoeven-van Elsbergen, cf. the project website, <https://aku.uni-mainz.de> (accessed on 19.09.2023). Cf. also Gülden (2016), Gülden, Krause, and Verhoeven (2017), Gülden and Verhoeven (2017), Gülden (2018), Gülden, Krause, and Verhoeven (2020), Moezel (2022, 7), and Gülden (2023), about goals and needs of a digital hieratic paleography.

While the Book of Kemyt has already been the subject of two major synoptic editions⁵ and several studies⁶ (including publications of new sources), it has yet to be fully recontextualized through the lens of materiality. Another monograph (in preparation) will take this interpretative approach, relying partly on the data from this manuscript. Additionally, it will incorporate most of the unpublished sources, which are not part of this paleography.

⁶ See e.g. Motte and Navratilova (2022), Motte (2022), Posch (2022), and Motte and Ritter (2023) for the most recent papers on this topic, with previous references.

2 The Kemyt script

The intrinsic raison-d'être of this paleography lies in the peculiarity of the Kemyt script, the interpretation of which depends on the definition of hieratic and cursive (linear) hieroglyphs.¹ Previous literature acknowledges its archaizing aspect evoking earlier forms of hieratic.² It has been connected to the cursive hieroglyph forms as in the Book of the Dead manuscripts and has sometimes even been understood as a script allowing transition from the contemporaneous hieratic to the cursive hieroglyphs in the funerary/religious texts to be learned by apprentice scribes.³ Goelet even stated that “in many instances, there was actually little difference between the Kemyt ‘hieratic’ and the cursive hieroglyphic form of a character.”⁴ Yet, a close examination of the Kemyt manuscripts through the lens of materiality highlights several dissimilarities between scripts. Some graphemes, like Gardiner D21  or Gardiner P8  for instance, do have a similar ductus and form, regardless of the cursive script. However, the Book of the Kemyt also displays allographs (or “diagnostic sign”),⁵ making it a priori a cursive script of its own.⁶

² For instance, Quirke (2004, 52) speaks of “‘Old Hieratic’, the standard cursive script of the late Old Kingdom to early Middle Kingdom,” while Goelet (2010, 125) describes the Kemyt script style as “reminiscent of the 11th Dynasty or even the First Intermediate Period,” Gasse (2005, 2) “la difficile (pour un étudiant de l’époque Ramesside) cursive du Moyen Empire” and Parkinson (2002, 323) as “a Middle Kingdom style hieratic, through linear hieroglyphs suitable for religious texts, to fully drawn hieroglyphs.” More recently, Fischer-Elfert (2020, 658) refers to the Kemyt script style as “semi-hieratic” and “offshoot of the Egyptian script,” while Quack (2023, 80) characterizes it as “sub-mittelhieratisch.”

³ See e.g. McDowell (2000, 231–232), Parkinson (2002, 322–323), Goelet (2003, 20–21), Goelet (2008, 103, fn. 2), Goelet (2010, 125–126), and Goelet (2013, 119).

⁴ Goelet (2010, 125). In fn. 26 he also specified that Parkinson (2002, 323) has reached a similar conclusion.

⁵ Cf. chapter 1, fn 3.

⁶ O. BM EA 21186, O. BM EA 21216, and O. BM EA 21284 are three parallel copies of a model letter used for a school exercise, which display a similar script to that of the Book of Kemyt. That said, they have not been included in this discussion. They do not preserve enough graphemes to make useful comparisons in table 2.1. Out of the ten selected graphemes, only four are present in the three British Museum ostraca: A1 , D58 , G17 , and G43 . See Hagen (2007) and Quack (2023) for a discussion of this model letter and Demarée (2002, 23–24, pl. 61–62 and 65) or https://www.britishmuseum.org/collection/object/Y_EA21284 (accessed on 19.11.2024) for pictures.

For an accurate definition of the Kemyt script, further elements should be considered, such as the ligaturing of characters and the sign iconicity, and deserve further research.⁷ This book is not the place to answer this complex question, as it primarily aims at displaying the data without the interpretative part (cf. chapter 1). At this moment, let it suffice to point out that ligatures are indeed very few in the Book of Kemyt,⁸ just as in the Book of the Dead as Goelet observed it,⁹ but the Kemyt graphemes do not have a strong iconicity unlike cursive hieroglyphs. The following list provides a selection of a few graphemes from different periods and text genres to illustrate this point (table 2.1¹⁰). I first chose two emblematic Kemyt excerpts¹¹: one from the late 17th–early 18th Dynasty (O. MMA Field No. 36112), and another dating from Ramesses III (O. Brussels E 3208). Both are used as key witnesses to make comparisons with earlier and contemporaneous material displaying cursive scripts on similar writing media, i.e. the 12th Dynasty Heqanakht letter I (P. MMA 22.3.516), the 17th Dynasty hymnic P. Moscow I, 16 314, a Ramesside excerpt of the Teaching of Amenemhat (O. LACMA M 80-203-204), the layout of which follows that of the Book of Kemyt, but the writing of which is a patent form of cursive hieroglyphs, in which many signs have preserved their iconicity, and finally the 18th Dynasty Book of Dead of Kha (P. Turin S. 8438) as one telling example of cursive hieroglyphs in funerary/religious texts.¹²

⁷ This is all the more complex as hieratic signs are sometimes used instead of their linear hieroglyph equivalents within cursive hieroglyphic inscriptions, such as the 18th-Dynasty Book of the Dead. See, for instance, the hare sign in the Book of Dead of Kha (cf. table 2.1 below) and Munro (1988, 254–257) and Díaz-Iglesias Llanos (2022) for further examples.

⁸ See the paleographic tables in section 5.25.

⁹ This reluctance to ligature signs makes Goelet (2013, 116) consider the Kemyt script cursive hieroglyphs, rather than a form of hieratic. Fischer-Elfert in Dreyer et al. (2002, 214–215), Burkard (2006, 411), Hagen (2007, 43), and Petersmarck (2012, 14–15) also speak of cursive hieroglyphs.

¹⁰ P. MMA 22.3.516 was drawn by James P. Allen (cf. Allen (2002)) and P. Moscow I, 16 314 by Georg Möller (cf. Möller (1927)). All remaining sources were drawn by myself.

¹¹ The selected sources had to be long excerpts to guarantee the presence of at least one hieratogram of each grapheme. Ramesside sources are many but few display the 11 selected graphemes in table 2.1.

¹² See also Ali (2001, 15–19) for further comparisons with several Books of the Dead of the 18th, 19th, and 21st dynasties – P. Cairo JE 51189, P. BM EA 9900, P. BM EA 9901, P. BM EA 10470, and P. Cairo CG 40007 respectively – for graphemes of Gardiner A1 , D1 , D2 , G17 , and W11 . For a diachronic overview of the recorded scripts in the Book of the Dead manuscripts, cf. 3 Selection criteria of sources and graphs

The Book of Kemyt is the core corpus of this study. To date, over 500 manuscripts have been recorded on various writing media (limestone ostraca, papyrus, pottery, walls, and writing tablets),¹ about half of which are still unpublished. Since it is not possible to include all 500 sources in the paleography, a selection has been made based on specific criteria, which are developed on the following sections.

The AKU project generally relies on several criteria to select a source for its database: securely dated, well-preserved, variety of text types, materiality, published and accessible.² For the needs of my project, I adopted a similar approach with a few adjustments.

3.1 Dating

The first criterion, securely dated source, depends on the mention of a date on the written object or is determined based on textual reasons, ceramologic dating, find context, or prosopography for instance.³ Even if a few Kemyt manuscripts do have a date, this does not help in dating them. These dates give season, month, and day but no regnal year nor king's name.⁴ The Book of Kemyt has a strong reproductive tradition with little textual modification, making the textual reasons mostly irrelevant as well. At most, Ramesside copies, the dating of which is confirmed through the find context, episodically show Late Egyptian influence. For example, a perfective s_dm.f form may replace the Middle Egyptian s_dm.n.f.⁵ While the fabric of ceramics may provide useful information to narrow the dating, ceramologic dating has rarely been applied to Kemyt sources.⁶ In addition, Kemyt manuscripts do not always have a clear find context. Many museums hold little information in the record cards of ostraca stemming from last-centuries' excavations. For instance, the UCL Petrie ostraca are Ramesside in dating according to paleographic comparisons. Yet, a "10th Dynasty–Middle Kingdom" dating is attributed to O. UC 31909 for instance,⁷ with no recorded provenance. The peculiarities of the Kemyt script may hinder dating by means of paleography. Most of the time, it is not possible to narrow down a Ramesside dating unless a colophon, a dedication, or an underwriting closes the manuscript, as in O. Cairo JE 56842 A/B from the hand of Panakht, under Ramesses II, or O. DeM 1171 A–B and O. Brussels E 3208 written by the scribe Hay, who lived under Ramesses III.⁸ This is the only case in which prosopography helps to secure the dating of a Kemyt source.

3.2 Preservation

3.2.1 Legibility through image enhancement

The well-preserved criterion concerns the legibility of the text.⁹ However, Kemyt manuscripts with fully preserved ink are exceedingly rare. The majority exhibit varying degrees of faint or light ink. The legibility may be improved thanks to two enhancing image tools: Hierax and DStretch.¹⁰ The enhancement methods are different and therefore complementary. In my experience,¹¹ the software Hierax provides good results for the black-inked texts provided that they are not too faded. One selects or combines four processing methods (Adapthisteq, LSV, Retinex, Vividness) and two postprocessing (Negative, Blue Negative) prior to initiating the image enhancement process. Adapthisteq, LSV, and Vividness are usually more conducive than Retinex. The ink becomes darker, increasing the legibility of the sign ductus. The blue negative postprocessing image also provides insight into the hieratogram forms. The black ink appears white, making the ductus sometimes more intelligible (cf. fig. 3.1).

On the other hand, the ImageJ plugin DStretch often works miracles with the red ink,¹² which is usually less readable in most of the Kemyt excerpts. O. Turin, ME, CGT 57554 is a telling example (cf. fig. 3.2). It preserves six (maybe seven) vertical lines of the Book of ⁷ It also holds true for O. UC 31910 and O. UC 31911. O. UC 31912, O. UC 31913, O. UC 31927, O. UC 31944, O. UC 31945, O. UC 31946, O. UC 31953 have a wider attributed chronological span (Middle Kingdom–New Kingdom), but they are also most likely Ramesside. See for instance <https://collections.ucl.ac.uk/Details/collect/46641> for O. UC 31953 (accessed on 23.01.2025). Its Ramesside dating is certain thanks to its joint piece found (and recorded, O. IFAO OL 6666) during the Deir el-Medina excavations led by Bruyère. See Motte and Ritter (2023).

Kemyt (§§13–17) with sections in black and red inks. Line 5 shows the most astonishing result. López drew a few vague black and even fewer red traces in his handmade facsimile, without providing a hieroglyphic transcription for the upper part of the line.¹³ This must be linked to the limitations of the naked eye. As soon as one opens a high-resolution digital camera image in *DStretch*¹⁴ and applies one of the eight common filters, red ink appears with more or less intensity. The YYE is less satisfying than the others as the red ink becomes a neon pink hardly legible for an accurate drawing. On the other hand, the YBK filter yields poor results for the red ink but may be useful for the black-inked sections.

O. Turin, ME, CGT 57546 and O. Turin, ME, CGT 57545 are another impressive example. Both belong to the same ceramics, on which the same section of the Book of Kemyt (§§6–7) was written twice, from different hands, one over the other. The first, in red ink, is clumsy and betrays a lack of experience, while the black hand displays more care and mastery in their sign drawing. Without DStretch, one could not precisely draw the signs from the first hand without interpreting their forms. The ink overlay obscures the red hieratograms. Yet, when employing DStretch filters, the red ink becomes more visible and legible. The LRE, YRD, and YRE filters turn effective (for O. Turin, ME CGT 57546, cf. fig. 3.3).

Image-enhancing tools still have limitations. Sometimes, the ink remains too light, making it impossible to draw, even if the graphemes are recognizable and readable.¹⁵ O. DeM 1639 verso is one of these examples¹⁶ and, accordingly, has been excluded from the paleography. In the case of O. ISACM E25348 (fig. 3.4), the DStretch LRE filter unveils two red-inked dates in the upper left corner but their preservation state prevents the drawing of complete hieratograms, except for one of the N5 ◉ signs (see page 382). Incomplete hieratograms like these of O. ISACM E25348 have been included only when the form was informative (cf. section 3.2.2) and if the source also displays (a) perfectly readable sign(s).¹⁷

For these reasons, I have disregarded the well-preserved criterion from time to time, though I have attempted not to interpret the hieratogram forms. As I am (re)publishing

¹³ López (1984, pls. 178–178a).

¹⁴ By experience, the image should be 8 bits/layer. 16 and 32 bits/layer cannot be processed with DStretch.

¹⁶ See <https://www.ifao.egnet.net/bases/archives/ostraca/?id=20098> (accessed on 19.09.2024) for images.

¹⁷ O. DeM 1141 has been left aside for this reason, despite the incomplete sign A2 , which might have been useful for comparative purposes provided the ink had been better preserved. Drawing this hieratogram would have required interpreting part of the ductus. See <https://www.ifao.egnet.net/bases/archives/ostraca/?id=19591> (accessed on 19.09.2024) for an image.

the Kemyt sources, I have also occasionally deviated from the published criterion¹⁸ and included unpublished material, whenever I held permission for its inclusion in this volume.¹⁹

3.2.2 Incomplete graphs

At first, I prioritized complete, well-inked graphs, but then reconsidered this in light of the source paucity. The peculiarity of the Kemyt script makes them useful for further comparisons, despite their incompleteness, but, for obvious reasons, it was impossible to draw (and include) every single incomplete or damaged hieratogram. The selected incomplete hieratograms mostly depend on their uniqueness and their usefulness for comparison. This uniqueness may be due to an unusual dating or provenance, to the grapheme, or even to the sign ductus. For instance, O. MMA 15.3.988 is the only known copy of Kemyt from Lisht. In the same vein, the last section of the Book of Kemyt, though not frequently copied, unveiled a new grapheme (JSesh US22A143VARA ) . Elaborate signs are rarely well-preserved and yet they display a variety of ductus (cf. also for instance JSesh A73  together with C11 , F40 , G30 , or G21  in the paleographic tables

¹⁸ This is mainly due to time constraints. See Gülden (2022) for more details.

¹⁹ The remaining unpublished sources for which I hold permission, such as the IFAO material, will be first published as a catalog.

3 Selection criteria of sources and graphs further below (chapter 5)). It holds for the owl sign (Gardiner G17 ) as well. In a few rare cases of group writing the owl proves to be a more cursive graph, closer to the contemporaneous hieratic script.²⁰ There is also an element of subjectivity. Sometimes hieratograms with slight damages were included too, as long as no interpretation of the ductus was required. This is the case for instance for Gardiner D21  and M17  in O. DeM 1119 or G5  in O. DeM 1127.

3.3 Materiality

This paleography aims at showcasing the materiality behind the text. In the process, it sheds light on the array of handwritings, from poor to well-trained, from clumsy to neat.²¹ The Book of Kemyt has been mostly written down in excerpts,²² on various writing materials,²³ from limestone flakes, to ceramics, to writing tablets, to walls, and to papyrus.²⁴ The sources were accordingly selected to reflect this diversity, as far as possible.²⁵ Copies of the Kemyt on papyrus are rare. I know of only one Late Middle Kingdom papyrus fragment (P. UCL 32271 A), which poorly preserves part of the first sections of the Kemyt.²⁶ In ascending order come next dipinti, on royal or private monuments, and writing boards. In Egyptological literature, the broad ostraca umbrella may encompass ceramics, limestone flakes, and limestone tablets.²⁷

Ancient Egyptian scribes used these three writing supports for their Kemyt excerpts, with a prevalence of limestone flakes from West-Thebes during the Ramesside period. In this book, limestone tablets are recorded with an initial “T” in the catalogue of sources (cf. section 4.1) to align with the wooden writing boards, whereas ceramics and limestone flakes are both catalogued as “O. xxxx.” In total, the paleographic tables (chapter 5) incorporate 5667 hieratograms from 204 ostraca (164 limestone chips – 40 ceramics), ²⁰ Cf. Motte (2022, 361–364).

²² O. Cairo JE 56842 A/B may have been a copy in extenso of the Book of Kemyt. In its current state of preservation, the manuscript has §§IVc–XVII.

²³ For the impact of the writing support on the facsimile type, cf. section 3.5.1.

²⁴ Cf. Motte (2024, 92–93).

²⁶ See <https://collections.ucl.ac.uk/Details/collect/40704> (accessed on 23.01.2025).

13 writing tablets (10 limestone tablets – 3 wooden tablets), 5 dipinti, and 1 papyrus (cf. fig. 3.5).

3.4 Accessibility

While some sources remain in situ, the vast majority are now housed in museums and research institutions worldwide (cf. fig. 3.7 and section 4.1 for the selected sources only). The accessible criterion requires securing high-resolution images with minimal delay. The duration of my termed postdoctoral fellowships imposed practical limits on delays to achieving the paleography and is one of the reasons why some sources, such as the Merenptah ostraca,²⁸ have been excluded from this book (fig. 3.6).²⁹ Figure 3.7 breaks down the 223 selected sources according to their current location, either on-site or in museums or research institutes.

²⁹ It should also be noted that the pandemic hindered museum visits and slowed down HR-image acquisition.

3.5 Processing status

3.5.1 Facsimiles made by the author

The paleographic tables in chapter 5 display mostly (but not only) my drawings (cf. section 3.5.2). I have favored digital drawings with Adobe Illustrator and a creative pen tablet (Wacom Intuos Pro), after the AKU method, for which I was trained during my Humboldt fellowship.³⁰ Digital facsimiles proved to be more advantageous than other methods for many reasons. For instance, it enables the conversion of facsimiles into vector graphics, in contrast to software such as Adobe Photoshop, without any loss of quality during the digital processing.³¹ For this reason, I have decided to make digital drawings of the published IFAO material (ostraca and limestone writing tablets³²), even if some of them had been previously drawn by Annie Gasse.³³ We indeed realized that our techniques were different (but complementary).³⁴ However, digital facsimiles also have their limitations. Facsimiles with tracing paper are sometimes more conducive. For instance, when the limestone is uneven or not flat enough to provide satisfying digital facsimiles, I opted for tracing paper and inks to secure a 1/1 scale for every hieratogram. I thus drew the signs of O. DeM 1112, O. DeM 1113, O. DeM 1116, O. DeM 1122 ro, O. DeM 1125, O. DeM 1131, O. DeM 1132, O. DeM 1135, O. DeM 1138 A-B, O. DeM 1142, O. DeM 1143, O. DeM 1144, O. DeM 1145 A-B, O. DeM 1151, O. DeM 1154, O. DeM 1163, O. DeM 1164, O. DeM 1165, O. DeM 1167, O. DeM 1171A, O. DeM 1782, O. DeM 1826, O. DeM 1865, O. DeM 1866, O. DeM 1870 + 1872³⁵, and O. DeM 1873 in the same way as the digital facsimiles, i.e. with dark black or red ink but without lighter nuances to copy the current state of ink preservation on the artefacts. Nuancing the ink color hinders the process and makes comparisons with other hieratograms less easy for the machines. I proceeded

³⁰ Svenja A. Gülden trained me during the first months of my Humboldt fellowship. The description of the method is part of her dissertation “Hieratisch der 18. Dynastie. Untersuchungen zur Schrift von Dipinti und Briefen auf Papyrus” (in preparation). Step-by-step instructions are in preparation. They will be published in due course in the project blog Hieratisch AKUell (<https://aku.hypotheses.org>). Cf. Moezel (2022, 19, fn. 31).

³¹ Cf. Moezel (2022, 19–24) for a more detailed explanation, including references to Berg and Donker van Heel (2000, 39–42), and Gülden (2018, 83–109).

³² Limestone writing tablets are usually assimilated with the ostraca.

³³ See Gasse (2005).

³⁴ Pers. comm. with Annie Gasse during my scientific mission at the IFAO in October 2024.

in the same way with the ceramic sherds, i.e. O. DeM 1109, O. DeM 1115 A-B, O. DeM 1129, O. DeM 1137, O. DeM 1173, O. DeM 1828, O. DeM 1835, O. DeM 1844, O. DeM 1850, O. DeM 1852, and O. DeM 1854. These drawings have then been scanned in high resolution, imported as TIFF files, and digitized to ensure vector graphics³⁶ in the same vein as the Adobe Illustrator drawings (cf. section 3.5.2).

Conversely, the pottery fragments from the Petrie Museum (London) and Museo Egizio (Turin) have exceptionally been drawn digitally, for it was not possible to visit museums in person during the COVID-19 pandemic. As a result, O. UC 31909, O. UC 31910, O. UC 31911, O. UC 31912, O. UC 31913, O. UC 31944, O. UC 31945, O. UC 31946, O. Turin, ME CGT 57054, O. Turin, ME, CGT 57286, as well as O. Turin, ME, CGT 57546 and its joint piece O. Turin, ME, CGT 57545 have been drawn digitally despite the fact that they are ceramic sherds. Another exception is the almost fully preserved ceramic O. DAN hierat. 5, the drawing of which was done based on the published black-and-white pictures.³⁷

Lastly, it should be noted here that the digital drawings of O. MMA Field No. 35144, O. MMA Field No. 36112, and T. Carnarvon III have been made based on black-and-white pictures from previous publications.³⁸

3.5.2 Facsimiles made by others

In sum, of the 223 sources, 30 drawings come from previously published material, while the other 193 (86%) are by my hand (cf. the pie chart in fig. 3.8). It means that 739 of 5698 hieratograms and sign groups in this paleography have been drawn by someone else than myself. I indeed intend to valorize recent works on the Book of Kemyt, whenever possible, and the next list (table 3.1) presents the dipinti, ostraca, and writing board drawn by colleagues who consented to share their data for the benefit of this paleography and the AKU database.

³⁶ Cf. Gülden (2018, 99–102) and Gerhards and Konrad (2022, 199–202) for a detailed explanation.

³⁷ Burkard (2018, pl. 4–5).

³⁸ See Hayes (1948) and Carnarvon and Carter (1912, pl. 76). O. MMA Field No. 35144 and O. MMA Field No. 36112 are now in the Egyptian Museum Cairo. Their temporary registration numbers are TR 25/3/52/1_(8), TR 25/3/52/1_(15+19), respectively, as O. MMA Field No. 36112 has been inscribed on both sides. They are part of Box SR 7/18951. Similarly, T. Carnarvon III, previously housed in the same museum (Cairo JE 43217), has been moved to the Grand Egyptian Museum (GEM) in Giza. Its new inventory number is GEM 1523.

The joint pieces O. UC 31953 + O. IFAO OL 6666 were drawn with Adobe Photoshop, while tracing papers were used for the ceramics (O. Amheida 11050, O. Ramesseum 2005-STO-003, and O. Ramesseum 2008-APS-036). As such, the hieratograms have been saved as TIFF and then converted to SVG files (cf. also section 3.5.1, fn. 36).

The O. Amarna EA 329 and 330 are also part of this section inasmuch as their current location is unknown (cf. fig. 3.9 for a black-and-white picture). The Pendlebury (?) drawings remain the only way to compare the hieratograms of these two Amarna manuscripts with the other sources.

4 Corpus

The sources have been included by courtesy of colleagues (cf. section 3.5.2 with table 3.1), museums, research institutes, and research projects. Section 4.1 lists the sources based on their writing support: dipinti (D.), ostraca (O.), and tablets (T). It also includes the dating, the provenance, the publication, and the text ID in the AKU database. The notes also provide the associated website links whenever available.

A concordance of publication and inventory numbers is provided in section 4.2, which is particularly useful for DeM numbers, often used in the literature. The abbreviations used here for the individual collections are listed in table 4.1.

5 Paleography

The following paleographical list follows the categories for cursive signs set out by the AKU project. An overview with the explanation of this categorization and examples by the project is forthcoming.

In the online version of the paleography, rubra are displayed in red, while in the printed version, these signs are marked in grey to reduce the sales price.

Incomplete signs are flagged with half brackets ‘ and ’ enclosing the text position column. For instance,  O. Turin, ME, CGT 57554, ‘2’ means the Gardiner A1-sign  in vertical line 2 is partly destroyed. This is intended to help the reader identify incomplete or broken signs whose stroke patterns could not be securely understood.

As some sections of Kemyt are more frequently written down than others, some graphemes are better represented, with an abundance of hieratograms such as Gardiner A1 , D21 , and M17 . Conversely, certain graphemes are documented within a single paragraph of the Book of Kemyt and, consequently, may correspond to just one hieratogram subsequent to the application of the selection criteria (cf. also chapter 3). This is notably the case for Gardiner T18  and V7 .

This paleography also displays numbers and ligatures. Numbers are limited to dates,¹ while ligatures are very few² in the copies of the Book of Kemyt, appearing intermittently, contingent upon the scribal habits of a particular individual. Yet, both form thought-provoking material to discuss the Kemyt cursive script(s) and, as such, fully belong to this paleography to allow for further research.

¹ Dates are present on the following ostraca: ANAsh.Mus.H.O.638, O. Amheida 11050, O. DeM 1109, O. DeM 1113, O. DeM 1135, O. DeM 1136, O. DeM 1143, O. DeM 1824, O. EA 329, O. IFAO inv. C 1771, O. IFAO inv. C 2181, O. UC 31910, and O. UC 31944. See Motte (2024, 99–101) for an overview.

² Ligatures have been recorded in ANAsh.Mus.H.O.943, ANAsh.Mus.H.O.572, O. Amarna EA 330, O. BM EA 5640, O. Turin, ME CGT 57554, O. ISACM E25348, O. DAN hierat. 5, O. DEM_2018_M25_176 + DEM_2019_M25_096, O. DEM_2019_M25_197, and O. UC 31946.

The Book of Kemyt is an ancient Egyptian school text preserved on pottery sherds, papyri, writing tablets, walls, and hundreds of ostraca, over six centuries. The handwriting displays a special style between the usual scripts, hieratic and cursive hieroglyphs. This volume is the first to present the complete inventory of signs from more than 200 sources, compiled primarily using digital methods. This paleography of the Book of Kemyt provides a synchronic and diachronic perspective, as well as cross-regional comparisons. The PDF version is linked to “AKU-PAL”, the online database of hieratic and cursive hieroglyphs.
